Additional Information

Slide 10: few_shot_prompting

The prompt that we used :

You are a Semantic Web and Knowledge Graph specialist. Your task is to translate natural language user questions into executable SPARQL queries based on the attached Harry Potter ontology file.

SCHEMA
Prefix: PREFIX hp: <http://www.semanticweb.org/utente/ontologies/2026/4/untitled-ontology-10#>
Classes: Person, Wizard, Student, Professor, DarkWizard, House, School, Spell, Owl, Cat, Toad.
Object Properties: attendsSchool, belongsToHouse, castsSpell, enemyOf, friendOf, teaches, taughtBy, hasMember, isPetOf.
Data Properties: hasName, hasAge, hasTitle.
Individuals format: underscore_style (e.g., Harry_Potter, Severus_Snape, Gryffindor).

INSTRUCTIONS
1. Analyze the user's question and map it to the classes and properties in the schema above.
2. Generate ONLY the SPARQL code. Do not add any extra explanations or conversational text.
3. Always use the 'hp:' prefix defined above.

FEW-SHOT EXAMPLES

User: Which students belong to Gryffindor?
AI:
```
SELECT ?student WHERE {
  ?student a hp:Student .
  ?student hp:belongsToHouse hp:Gryffindor .
}
```

User: Who are Harry Potter's friends?
AI:
```
SELECT ?friend WHERE { hp:Harry_Potter hp:friendOf ?friend .
}
```

User: Which professor teaches the Expelliarmus spell?
AI:
```
SELECT ?professor WHERE {
  ?professor a hp:Professor .
  ?professor hp:teaches hp:Expelliarmus .
}
```

User: What spells does Voldemort cast?
AI:
```
SELECT ?spell WHERE { hp:Voldemort hp:castsSpell ?spell .
}
```

Slide 15 prompt:

Extract entities and relationships from the following Harry Potter text and represent them as RDF-style triples.

Use the format:

Subject | Predicate | Object

Only include meaningful semantic relationships that could be added to an ontology.

Text:
Harry James[59] Potter (b. 31 July 1980)[1] was an English half-blood[2] wizard, and one of the most famous wizards of modern times. The only child and son of James and Lily Potter (née Evans), Harry's birth was overshadowed by a prophecy, naming either himself or Neville Longbottom as the one with the power to vanquish his arch-enemy, Lord Voldemort, the most powerful and feared Dark wizard in the world. After half of the prophecy was reported to Voldemort, courtesy of Severus Snape, Harry was chosen as the target due to his many similarities with the Dark Lord. This in turn caused the Potter family to go into hiding.
Voldemort made his first attempt to circumvent the prophecy when Harry was a year and three months old. During this attempt, he murdered Harry's parents as they tried to protect him, but this unsuccessful attempt to kill Harry led to Voldemort's first downfall. This downfall marked the end of the First Wizarding War, and to Harry henceforth being known as "The Boy Who Lived",[5] as he was the only known survivor of the Killing Curse due to being magically protected by his mother's loving sacrifice. In accordance with the terms of the prophecy, this attempt on his life also established him, not Neville, as Voldemort's nemesis.
One consequence of Lily's sacrifice was that her orphaned son had to be raised by her only remaining blood relative, his Muggle aunt Petunia Dursley, and her husband, uncle Vernon Dursley. While in their care, he would be protected from Lord Voldemort due to the Bond of Blood charm that Albus Dumbledore placed upon him.[60] This powerful charm would protect him until he either came of age, or no longer called his aunt's house home. Due to Petunia's resentment of her sister and her magical abilities, Harry grew up abused and neglected.

Shortly before Harry's eleventh birthday, there were several attempts from Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry to send him a letter inviting him to not only come to Hogwarts, but also to explain his magical heritage. Though Vernon Dursley ultimately made the decision to leave their residence at 4 Privet Drive temporarily to evade the letters, his attempts were ultimately for naught. On his eleventh birthday, Harry learned from Rubeus Hagrid that he was a wizard.[61] Rubeus Hagrid took Harry from the Dursley family the next day to Diagon Alley. This is where Harry withdrew some of his money from Gringotts Wizarding Bank, where Hagrid bought Harry's snow-white owl, Hedwig. While he was in Diagon Alley, Harry also got his school supplies (i.e., books from Flourish and Blotts, his robes from Madam Malkin's Robes for All Occasions, and his potion equipment from Slug & Jiggers Apothecary).

Harry began attending Hogwarts in 1991. The Sorting Hat told Harry that he would do well in Slytherin House, but Harry pleaded "not Slytherin". The Hat heeded this plea and sorted the young wizard into Gryffindor House.[56] At school, Harry became best friends with Ron Weasley and Hermione Granger. He was also the youngest Seeker in a century, making the house team in his first year when Minerva McGonagall introduced him to Oliver Wood, Gryffindor's Quidditch captain at the time. He later became the captain of the Gryffindor Quidditch Team in his sixth year, winning two Quidditch Cups.[62] While in school, Harry also demonstrated an extraordinary talent for Defence Against the Dark Arts.[63][64][65][66][67] He became even better-known in his early years for protecting the Philosopher's Stone from Voldemort, saving Ron's sister Ginny Weasley, solving the mystery of the Chamber of Secrets, slaying Salazar Slytherin's basilisk, and learning how to conjure a corporeal Patronus at the age of thirteen, which took the form of a stag. In his fourth year, Harry won the Triwizard Tournament, although the person had to be seventeen to enter, and Harry was only fourteen. The competition ended with the tragic death of Cedric Diggory and the return of Lord Voldemort. During the next school year, in defiance of Dolores Umbridge and the Ministry of Magic's strict regime against the teaching of Defence Against the Dark Arts and the continued introduction of the new Educational Decree, Ronald Weasley and Hermione Granger first had the idea of creating an illegal Defence Against the Dark Arts group called Dumbledore's Army. Harry was initially reluctant to the idea, but he gradually came to like it and eventually agreed to start the group. He also fought in the Battle of the Department of Mysteries, during which he lost his godfather, Sirius Black, and the prophecy was destroyed.

Harry played a significant role in many other battles of the Second Wizarding War. During what would have been his seventh year, he, Ron, and Hermione hunted down and destroyed Voldemort's Horcruxes. During the Battle of Hogwarts, Harry personally saw the deaths of Severus Snape and Fred Weasley while learning that Remus Lupin, Nymphadora Tonks, Colin Creevey, and many others had fallen in the battle as well. He encountered Voldemort and nearly sacrificed himself, knowing that his doing so was the only way to destroy the fragment of Voldemort's soul inside of him. While in limbo, after Voldemort cursed him in the forest clearing, Dumbledore gave Harry advice and background information on the Dark Lord. When told that he could choose to live or to "move on", Harry ultimately chose to live. After he awoke, Harry confronted Voldemort and defeated him once and for all.

Harry was also noted for being the only known Master of Death, having united the three Deathly Hallows at the mere age of seventeen.

After the war, Harry became an Auror and helped reform and revolutionise the Ministry of Magic.[54] At some point, he married Ginny, with whom he had three children: James Sirius, Albus Severus, and Lily Luna. He was also named the godfather of Edward "Teddy" Lupin by the late Remus Lupin. In 2007, Harry was promoted to Head of the British Auror Office at the age of 26,[68][53] and would occasionally deliver Defence Against the Dark Arts lectures at Hogwarts.[54] He was later promoted to Head of the Department of Magical Law Enforcement by the summer of 2020